With no telephones, internet, or roads, the mission plane is a vital lifeline for Amerindians living in these remote jungle villages in Western Guyana. I picked up this toddler and her mother with the plane two hours after the radio call came in. First, we flew to the regional clinic downriver, doing in twenty minutes what would have taken all day in the boat. Once at the clinic, the toddler was quickly assessed and referred on to Georgetown. There she could receive treatment at a better equipped facility.

In a few short days I would fly this mom and her little girl back to their village. In a few short years adult teeth would replace the gaps in her mouth. The only records of the incident would be fading memories and an entry in my logbook.

A NOTE

From the Cockpit

As a team of pilots and mechanics, we are committed to using our resources effectively, maximizing our impact on the communities that we serve. We have chosen to standardize our fleet of "bush planes" to the Cessna 182P, produced from 1972 to 1976. The aircraft's relative simplicity, its load carrying capacity, its ability to burn 87 octane gasoline, and its short field performance characteristics are ideal for our medical work.

Your airplane is just what we are looking for! Would you like to be a part of this lifesaving mission by donating your special asset? Just think! It could be YOUR Cessna 182P taking the next snake-bitten girl or fever-ridden man to the hospital, giving them the chance to live!

OPPORTUNITY

See. Help. Make a Difference!

The call came in about mid-morning. The tipsy toddler had fallen down twelve steps, landing face-down on the concrete pad. The blood, the missing front teeth, and the massive swelling on the child's head sent the health worker, Monisa, running for the radio. The best option was to call for the medevac flight as no doctors, x-ray machines, or emergency care facilities were available within 200 miles. (Continued)
